The Use of a Diary

The highest form of value in the use of a Diary is not universally understood. As an aid to memory the Diary serves an every-day need in the lives of most people who lay any claim to methodical living; but this is merely "note-making" or "memoranda," and an ordinary calendar or date book will answer the purpose just as well. The Diary used for its most valuable purpose becomes an indispensable aid to the achievement of man's prime objective while on earth—self-development. The most powerful agency in self-development is understanding of Self. Philosophers and scientists have long been in accord with respect to the truism that "the best way to determine what a human being is and what he may be expected to be in the future is to learn what he has been in the past." The man who knows himself becomes wise and powerful far beyond his fellows. His greatest potential aid in coming to know himself is a well-kept Diary, and a well-read Diary. As he writes in his book he records himself; as he reads later what he has written, he sees himself as he was; and since he is a reasoning creature, he forthwith makes comparison and sees himself as he is. Thus he comes to know himself.

The form and size of this Diary is designed to meet the needs of the real diary keeper, to become a true mirror of the owner's self.

Simple Rules for Lasting Loveliness

by

BARBARA GOULD

How delightful it is to realize that beauty is not merely a matter of years, but of proper, faithful care; that any woman whose skin is normal and healthy can possess the charm of a youthful complexion throughout the forties and beyond.

Lasting loveliness is not only possible, but easy. The first thing to remember is that your complexion is the most important individual element in your personal attractiveness. The next step is to know how to care for it.

Each of the four ages of beauty presents its own particular skin need. To insure radiant, youthful firmness and clarity for the complexion throughout all four ages, simply meet those progressive needs of the skin as they arise.

In the 'Teens

In the 'teens, for example, the normal skin requires only daily thorough, gentle cleansing with a dependable cleansing cream—one that is light in texture so that it liquefies instantly and floats out dirt and impurities from the depths of the smallest pores.

In the Twenties

In the twenties, add the protection of a good finishing cream, or daytime cream, to serve as a base for make-up and at the same time act as an emolient to the skin, guarding it against weather and dust.

In the Thirties

It is in the third age of beauty, the thirties, that Nature's own food supply may become insufficient. This means it must be sup-
